

MY FAVORITE
K.C. MEMORY"

Tim Liotta,
Former PD
KFNS-FANS 590

"It was the Rams' first season in St. Louis and we had received volumes of bad press from Caesar (The St. Louis Post-Dispatch Sports-Media Critic Dan Caesar).

"Karen thought we needed to retaliate," recalled Liotta, who remembers that Carroll had just completed reading a militant marketing warfare book.

"Karen ordered us to plan an offensive, trapping Caesar in triangulation, tackling him from behind in the dark parking garage after a game, and then setting his artificial leg on fire," lamented Liotta, who remains in therapy today. "I jokingly suggested poisoning Caesar," said a despondent Liotta, "but Karen thought it was too cliché. It was only then I realized she was serious. I sent three interns to do the job and they failed miserably," said Liotta. "I was uncomfortable with the assignment to begin with because I liked and respected Dan. But now I had to tell Karen that we failed."

Liotta is now employed as an overnight cashier at a Quik Trip somewhere in North Dakota.

WHAT ELSE DO THEY DO?

by Angie Warner

One of the more rewarding things about working with new people is getting to know other aspects of their fascinating lives!

Here's how several of our new brethren at KMOX answered the Question of the Month, "What's your favorite hobby?"

Carol Daniel:
Archery

Tom Schiller :
Pistol Marksmanship

Tom Langmeyer:
Poison Blow Darts

Randy Karraker:
Pushing Managers Out of Windows

Roger Brand:
Big Giant Mercedes
Benz Head-On
Collisions on Hwy 40

Charles Jaco:
Cutting Elevator Cables

Charles Brennan:
Knife Throwing

Nan Wyatt:
Stamp Collecting

What's YOUR favorite hobby? Please e-mail to Angie Werner in time for our next newsletter!

CBS EXEC CLINGS TO LIFE!

In a disturbing and shocking revelation, KEZK GSM John Stirrat has exploded!

Stirrat, a testament to failed waist management, was in attendance at Chevy's Mexican Restaurant on June 5th when he met a swift and unfortunate demise.

After reportedly ingesting 47 baskets of tortilla chips amid 90+ degree temperatures, Stirrat suffered a mild "dehydrational seizure" according to attending physicians. He was hastily given every liquid by his caring staff, including water, Margucritas, several brands of Mexican beer, and antifreeze in a feeble attempt to revive him.

Tragically, the volatile combination of liquids and grain produced an uncontrollable hyper-swelling, resulting in a "stomach blowout" in the right quadrant of his torso.

Three attendees at Stirrat's promotional brainchild, "CINCO-DE-JUNO" were injured. Two unnamed women were drenched in ooze, treated and released from St. Mary's Hospital. A third woman was knocked unconscious when struck in the head by a baseball-sized kidney stone during the blast. She remains in guarded condition.

Eyewitness accounts are cloaked in an "Oklahoma City-esque" aura, as most individuals remain too traumatized to speak.

One anonymous passer-by observed that the hurling kidney stone resembled "a bowling ball being shot out of a bazooka." Another reported that "there was a green slime on everything, kind of like the Ghostbusters had been there. I was mortified."

Stirrat is resting comfortably and recovering at a local Car-X, where he is listed in "stable, but unable to roll" condition.